Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a calibration method and apparatus for an image pickup device, and more particularly, to a calibration method and apparatus for an image pickup device by which an image pickup device can be calibrated in a short time, and an image pickup system using the image pickup device. 2. Description of the Related Art In general, image pickup devices are designed for a specific performance standard, and such image pickup devices may be used for various purposes. For example, image pickup devices are used in devices such as a digital camera for performing image recording and/or playback, and/or a scanner for reading an image of a document, a cassette tape, or an image recorded on a photographic film. When image pickup devices are used for various purposes, it is important to properly calibrate them since such calibration of image pickup devices provides for easier control of the image pickup device in use and is an essential aspect of maintaining a high quality of the output. Calibration of image pickup devices involves measuring and setting a parameter (e.g., white balance, auto-focusing, color balance, and gamma) of the image pickup device and adjusting the parameter to a desired standard value. In a conventional calibration method, an image of a white plate is first acquired by an image pickup device and then the white plate image is measured in one of several representative locations (e.g., the center, left, and right edges of the image) in the acquired image. The measured value is compared with a standard value, and a parameter of the image pickup device is changed in response to the difference between the measured value and the
